Press Release

6th Annual QC Cybersecurity Conference

Davenport, Iowa October 2-3, 2020: Cybersecurity and privacy are on the minds of government officials, business leaders, educators and parents. In an age where everything can and will be connected to the Internet, we are faced with the opportunities that new connected technology brings and at the same time must deal with attacks coming fast and furious by our digital adversaries. The 6th annual Quad Cities Cybersecurity Conference seeks to raise awareness to these threats and offer solutions. Security executives from around the world will come together online on October 2nd and 3rd to provide a roadmap for businesses, IT professionals, students and the general public on how to prepare and defend against cybersecurity threats. Topics include: cybersecurity, privacy, risk, IoT, Work from Home, Artificial Intelligence and Quantum Computing.

CornCon, as the conference is better known, was founded in 2015 and is now managed by the nonprofit Docent Institute. The 2020 Platinum Sponsors are Malwarebytes & vArmour. This year, the conference will be online and free to attend. Attendees will receive continuing professional education credits. Presentations will be recorded for later viewing.

Registration and additional information can be found on the conference website: www.corncon.net.
